FY06

COLLEGE OF LAW

STEFEN J. KAMINSHINE, DEAN
September, 2006
Section A. Summary of Major Accomplishments

Planning for the Future

In 2005-06 the College of Law continued its implementation of a multi-year plan to develop distinctive programmatic initiatives made possible by a recent Board of Regents-approved tuition increase and a University initiative designed to promote interdisciplinary collaboration across departments and colleges. Under this plan, 2005-06 saw the College nurture the growth of its centers of excellence: the Center for Law, Health and Society, and the Center for the Comparative Study for Metropolitan Urban Growth. During this same year, the college also approved a second live client (the HeLP Legal Services Clinic) that will focus on children and families, revived its International Connection program that hosts visiting law students from emerging from eastern block countries, converted its successful pro bono Fulton County Pro Bono Jail Project into a clinic for academic credit, and began an initiative in biotechnology law and policy by the hiring of nationally renown bioethicist and legal scholar Professor Paul Lombardo from the University of Virginia.

Planning is underway to build on these successful starts by helping the new Center achieve national prominence, by pursuing initiatives in Intellectual Property, Trial Advocacy, and Dispute Resolution, and by opening the new HeLP Legal Services Clinic in the spring 2007 semester. This multi-year planning is an outgrowth of the College’s 2002 Strategic Plan and its 2003 Action Plan, which collectively offer a roadmap that will help the College to build upon its past successes and achieve its desired goals for the future.

In 2005-06 the College supplemented these planning efforts by beginning a self study process for the drafting of a Self-Study as required by the American Bar Association. This self-study process, which will continue during the fall 2006 semester, is required as part of the college’s preparation for a spring 2007 ABA site accreditation visit.

All of these efforts, along with the continuing growth of the faculty’s record of research and academic engagement on a national scale, will enable the College to enhance its reputation and profile nationally. The U.S. News & World Report’s 2006 survey of the best law schools saw the College continue to be ranked among the top 100 law schools and emerge as the youngest law school with such a status.

Interdisciplinary Programs

Interdisciplinary programs are one of the strengths of the College of Law. The College’s two centers, the Center for Law, Health & Society and the Center for the Comparative Study of Metropolitan Urban Growth, moved into their second years of operation and each continued with its own strong interdisciplinary focus.

The Center for Law, Health and Society explores the intersection of law, medicine, health policy, and ethics. The Health Center's name reflects its multidisciplinary focus and its emphasis on cross-professional education, research, and outreach. By promoting opportunities for collaboration among students, scholars, and health-related professionals in both law and non-law disciplines, the Center is already becoming a leading forum for examining the interplay of law and medical ethics and the impact of ethical norms in shaping health policy. Under the leadership of Professor Charity Scott, in 2005 the Health Center continued its distinguished speaker series, its faculty fellows program to attract leading national figures in the health law field, its trailblazing Health Law Partnership (HeLP) with the Children's Healthcare of Atlanta and Atlanta Legal Aid, and its legislative advocacy program for students. A more complete description of the Health Center's activities in 2005-06 is set forth in its annual report, which is attached.

Under the leadership of Professors Colin Crawford, Julian Juergensmeyer and Janice Griffith, the Metro Growth Center has been equally active in its second year, continuing its innovative foreign enrichment course taught by leading international scholars; a visiting lecture series; its "Urban Fellows" program that provided forums for law students and Georgia State graduate students in related disciplines to meet with leading urban planners and policymakers; and its study abroad program that began in the summer of 2005 in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. A more complete description of the Metro Growth Center's activities in 2005-06 is set forth in its annual report, which is attached.

The College of Law's interdisciplinary focus also is reflected in its joint degree programs. The college added a new joint degree program in law and health administration in collaboration with the Institute of Public Health in the College of Health and Human Sciences. The College of Law now offers six joint degree programs; the other programs are in law and business administration with the Robinson College of Business, in law and public administration with Georgia State's Andrew Young School of Policy Studies, in law and philosophy with the University's College of Arts and Sciences, in law and city and regional planning with the Georgia Institute of Technology's City and Regional Planning Program in its College of Architecture and in law and health administration with the Institute of Health Administration in the Robinson College of Business.

Outside of the joint degree programs, Law Faculty continue to teach courses that are cross-listed with other Georgia State departments. Law faculty member William Edmundson holds a joint appointment with the Department of Philosophy and Charity Scott holds a joint appointment with the Institute of Health Administration in the Robinson College of Business.
International Relationships, Foreign Visitors and Fulbright Scholars

The College of Law continued its Summer Academy in International Commercial Arbitration, which takes upward of 50 students to Europe each spring. The program, led by Professor E.R. Lanier, brings the college in contact with distinguished European experts in commercial arbitration who, in turn, visit the university during the regular academic year. Based in Linz, Austria, the program visited arbitration courts in Vienna, Prague, and other Central European cities. Instruction was shared by Georgia State College of Law Faculty and faculty from the University of Warsaw.

In addition, the College of Law offered a summer foreign study program in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. This program, led by Professor Colin Crawford and offered in collaboration with the Florida International University College of Law and the Seattle University School of Law as well as the GSU Institute of Public Health, expands foreign study opportunities for law students in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, furthers academic exchange between these institutions and with law schools in Rio de Janeiro, and increases opportunities for student exchanges and academic collaboration between the United States of America and the Federal Republic of Brazil. This program offered courses on Cross-cultural Conflict Resolution, Comparative Environmental Law, International Environmental Law, and International Trade Law.

The College of Law was fortunate to have in residence Dr. WanPyo Hong, Associate Professor in Real Estate Management at Myongji College in Seoul, Korea, and a recipient of a 2004-05 Fulbright Scholarship award. His visit at the College of Law began in February 2004 and ran until December 2005. Dr. WanPyo Hong requested affiliation with the law school “because of [its] impressive work on land use law.” From the law school faculty, Professor Michael Landau was awarded a Fulbright Scholarship for the fall of 2005 at the Intellectual Property Rights University Center in Helsinki, Finland, where he conducted research on International Intellectual Property issues and led seminars for and supervised postgraduate law students. Professor Colin Crawford was awarded a Fulbright pursuant to which he spent much of the Spring 2006 semester in the Dominican Republic, where he researched issues related to the provision of potable water and lectured on comparative environmental law and international environmental law and regulation. Dr. Gregory Jones was named a Visiting Research Scholar by the Max Planck Institute for Research on Collective Goods in Bonn, Germany. In a series of visits over the 2006-07 academic year, Dr. Jones will focus on his work related to computational modeling of conflict and cooperative behaviors. Professor William Edmundson was named the inaugural HLA Hart Visiting Fellow at Trinity College, Dublin; he was in residence from late April to mid-June of 2006.

In the fall of 2005, two law students from the Republic of Georgia were visiting guests at the College of Law as part of the International Connection Program. The International Connection Program, in partnership with the Central European and Eurasian Law Initiative (CEELI) of the American Bar Association, is an exchange program with law schools from emerging democracies. The program is made possible through combined efforts of public, private and legal institutions in Atlanta. Donations from various companies and organizations enable the European students to come to Atlanta for classes at the College of Law. For the students from the Republic of Georgia, Delta Air Lines provided flights from Europe, and the Georgia Association for Women’s Lawyers arranged host families for the visiting students.

In the spring of 2006, the College’s Center for the Comparative Study of Metropolitan Growth continued its Foreign Enrichment Course in Comparative Environmental and Land Use Law. The course featured several internationally known foreign scholars each of whom visited the College of Law and taught a 3-week module of a semester-long course. The foreign visitors included: Professor Fernando Walcacer from the Pontifical Catholic University School of Law; Professor Michel Prieur, dean emeritus of the University of Limoges in France; and Professor Rachelle Alterman, the David Azrieli Chair in Architecture and Town Planning at Technion University in Haifa, Israel.

The Law School as an Intellectual Hub

The Center for Law, Health and Society launched its biotechnology and law initiative by hosting a four-part seminar series on “What it Means to Be Human,” inviting distinguished panels of national scholars from across the country. The Center for the Comparative Study of Metropolitan conducted its second annual Comparative Foreign Enrichment Program by inviting three prominent foreign scholars to each give three weeks of instruction about the environmental and land use law of the metropolitan areas within their respective countries. The Metro Growth Center also held its second annual “Urban Fellows” Program in which outstanding graduates in law and other disciplines were chosen from across the University to participate in a monthly colloquium with prominent regional speakers on a theme for the year. The theme for 2005-06 was transportation. In addition, in the Spring 2006, the Metro Center and the Law Reviews co-sponsored an international symposium on the theme of metropolitan re-development. The domestic and foreign scholars who participated in the symposium submitted papers that were later published in the College’s Law Review.

In February 2006 the College’s Oglethorpe Society sponsored a legislative forum on Pending Changes to Georgia’s Eminent Domain Laws that featured a panel of Georgia members of the Senate and House, including State Senators Chapman and Pearson; Representative Rick Golick, and moderated by Gerald Bryant of GPTV.
The endowment established by the Southeastern Bankruptcy Law Institute (SBLI) to support visits by nationally known experts in the bankruptcy field once again supported a program in which the visitors taught classes at the law school, shared their research interests with faculty, met with members of the SBLI, and made presentations on bankruptcy related topics to bankruptcy lawyers and judges. Professor Thomas Plank of the University of Tennessee College of Law served as the SBLI visitor during the 2005 fall semester, and Professor Peter Alces of William and Mary School of Law SBLI visitor during the spring 2006 semester.

In June, more than 550 attendees from the U.S. and around the world descended on Georgia State University’s College of Law for the 2006 Biennial Conference for the Legal Writing Institute (LWI). As the host site, Georgia State’s College of Law sponsored the conference in conjunction with Mercer University’s Walter F. George School of Law, the Emory University School of Law, John Marshall Law School of Atlanta and the University of Georgia School of Law.

A particular success in 2005-06 was the second year of the College’s Visiting Faculty Lunchtime Colloquia Series, in which the College would invite leading scholars to campus for one-day visits in which they would discuss with the faculty their current scholarship and works in progress. Sponsored by the College of Law’s Committee on Faculty Development, the lunchtime series featured scholars from Washington University School of Law, Wisconsin School of Law, University of Texas School of Law, Florida State University College of Law, Fordham Law School, and the University of Illinois College of Law.

Technology and Facilities Enhancements

Technology has had a profound effect upon the practice of law, legal research, instruction, and law school administration. The College of Law at Georgia State University is proud to be recognized as a leader in embracing these new innovations. By nature technology changes rapidly, and the College of Law is changing just as rapidly with constant integration of technology into all aspects of its academic endeavors. The college continues to be ranked as one of the “most wired” law school in the country by the National Jurist Magazine.

This past fall the College of Law celebrated the opening of its newly renovated sixth floor expansion in the Urban Life Building, a $1 million project that has added more than 8,000 square feet to the College. The attractive new space includes two large, tiered classrooms, two seminar rooms, a new courtroom, 11 offices and a student lounge. The sixth floor expansion features classrooms that are equipped with “smart” podiums and power and data connectivity for students, including wireless. The courtroom offers the latest technology upgrades such as computer controlled video cameras, high-end audio components and an automated multimedia projection / recording system with touch screen controls. The courtroom also boasts electronic litigation tools such as the TrialDirector Suite™ evidence presentation software from InData Corporation, CaseMap™ case analysis software from CaseSoft and Binder discovery management software from RealLegal, LLC.

The College also upgraded the technology in its classrooms. New computers and Sympodium units were added to each classroom while audio/visual enhancements were made to the College's two largest classrooms, allowing for direct video feeds and "overflow" viewing capability. In addition, a mobile video-conferencing system was added to facilitate synchronous and asynchronous capabilities for distance learning, seminars and student services such as career placement.

Development and Alumni Cultivation

Taking an active role in the College of Law's development efforts, Dean Kaminshine, in his first official year, led the way in setting new fundraising records for the college. Overall giving to the college, alumni participation rates, and individual class gifts all outstripped previous years. New gifts and pledges of $887,000 surpassed last year's total of $711,559. Alumni participation reached an all-time high of 23%, capping three successful programs – an email outreach, a class gift effort, and a law firm campaign. The Class of 2006 earned bragging rights – 58% contributed $6,800 to the Patricia T. Morgan Scholarship before graduating, while the Class of 2005 followed closely by the June 30th deadline with a 48% giving rate. A spirited contest among Atlanta law firms resulted in twelve firms reaching their goal of 100% giving from fellow law alumni. In an unexpected record, the GSU Foundation tracked the highest number of online gifts ever made to the university as an influx of several hundred electronic gifts for the College of Law marked the final days of the 2006 fiscal year!

Aiding in this effort were a Development staff of three, including a new Director of Development & Alumni Relations, and an impressive volunteer group. Many of the college's fundraising volunteers belong to the 46-member Graduate Leadership Council who are charged with conducting the peer-to-peer campaign in law firms and other organizations for the college, as well as serving as class agents. Ninety-four percent of the Graduate Leadership Council made individual contributions as well.

In 2006 faculty, staff, alumni, students, and friends strongly supported the Patricia T. Morgan Scholarship as the college continued to build endowment for this fund in memory of a beloved professor who taught at the college from 1998 to 2002. The endowment was completed for a new scholarship, the F.A. O'Daniel Scholarship, thanks to the generosity of alumnus Keith O'Daniel, Class of 1991, and the F.A. O'Daniel Foundation. This scholarship supports the education of a law student who has been a recognized student athlete and leader in his undergraduate years and will be awarded in the fall of 2006. The College of Law now awards a total of 12 named scholarships annually; the largest is the Atlanta Law School Foundation which in 2006 provided 22 full tuition and fee scholarships to law students.
Two new professorships were also announced in 2006. The Bobby Lee Cook Professorship in Law was established by renowned attorney Bobby Lee Cook with a gift of $250,000 and plans to generate further support for a fully endowed chair. This professorship will help the law school to attract top faculty in the future and maintain the school's reputation for outstanding teaching. In recognition of the important work of the Tax Clinic in serving low-income citizens, the Mark and Evelyn Trammell Chaired Professorship in Tax Law was created through the generosity of the Mark and Evelyn Trammell Foundation and alumnus Tim Trankina, Class of 1989.

The Center for Law, Health, & Society continued to attract dollars, most notably a $750,000 grant from the Lettie Pate Evans Foundation, an affiliate of the Woodruff Foundation, in support of its community service partnership with Children's Healthcare of Atlanta and the Atlanta Legal Aid Society. A portion of the grant will be used to open a civil legal services clinic, HeLP, at the college in January of 2007. College of Law students will work on cases related to children's health and welfare.

The Intellectual Property Initiative is experiencing tremendous programmatic growth and serving Atlanta businesses and law firms as a resource for the exchange of ideas, information, best practices and networking. Raising over $91,000 in 2006 and over $220,000 since its inception in 2004, the group hosted the second Intellectual Property Celebration, the first Hot Topics Panel, and a successful second Southeastern Intellectual Property Job Fair last year. An important new initiative, the Corporate Intellectual Property Roundtable, brought over 50 businesses to GSU's Student Center in April and signified the first collaborative effort of the university's College of Law and Robinson College of Business. The IP Founders group now numbers nearly 122 supporters whose gifts range from $25 to $10,000 plus.

Students and alumni alike are attending annual events in increasing numbers. Among the most successful are the spring and fall Henry J. Miller Distinguished Lecture Series, a popular lunchtime format supported by the Loridans Foundation, and the Ben F. Johnson Jr. Public Service Award Celebration, named for our founder and first dean. A new event for 2005, but one that has all the marks of a great College of Law tradition, is the Newly Minted Lawyers Reception, a swearing-in ceremony for the college's newest attorneys upon successful completion of their bar exam.

With a strong alumni base of support, now numbering 3,500 graduates, the goal of the college, its dean and development staff, is to stay connected with its alumni and to continue to build support for a college that has in the dean's words "sprinted into its second generation."

New Faculty & Staff Recruited

Following a national search, Georgia State University Provost Ron Henry named Steven J. Kaminshine dean of the College of Law. The appointment of Kaminshine, who has been a professor at the College of Law for two decades and has served as interim dean since July of 2004, was effective this past fall. Prior to being named interim dean in 2004, Kaminshine served as the College of Law’s associate dean for academic affairs. He has been a member of the law faculty since 1985 and teaches courses in civil procedure, labor law and employment discrimination law. Kaminshine’s scholarship focuses on labor and employment issues, and he frequently speaks on labor and employment law topics. He has been an active member of the Labor and Employment Sections of the Georgia and Atlanta Bar Associations, and has twice chaired the Atlanta Bar’s section.

The College of Law successfully recruited Professor Paul A. Lombardo to lead an interdisciplinary initiative in law, bioethics and science. He will join Georgia State in time for the Fall 2006 semester. Professor Lombardo brings a strong national reputation as a leading scholar at the intersection of these fields, and will develop the law and science initiative in close cooperation with the College’s Center for Law, Health and Society. Professor Lombardo comes to Georgia State from the University of Virginia where he held faculty appointments in both the Medical School and Law School, and served as the Director of the University’s Center for Biomedical Ethics. Professor Lombardo’s credentials include 15 years in interdisciplinary academic settings teaching courses related to law, medicine, science and ethics. His publication record reflects not only a wide-ranging facility in these interdisciplinary areas, but drawing upon his background as a historian, an ability to add important historical perspectives to his research. His scholarship on the history of eugenics and the legal and ethical issues surrounding genetic research has received widespread acclaim, as has his collaboration with private industry and policy makers at the state and national level. Professor Lombardo holds a B.A. from Rockhurst College, an M.A. from Loyola University in Chicago, and both a Ph.D (in history) and a J.D. from the University of Virginia.

In preparation of the opening of the HeLP Clinic in the Spring of 2007, the College of Law successfully recruited Professors Sylvia Caley and Lisa Bliss at the Associate Co-Directors to handle the day to day operations. Sylvia Caley is also the Director of the Health Law Partnership (HeLP), a medical-legal community collaboration among Children’s Healthcare of Atlanta, the Atlanta Legal Aid Society, and the College of Law.
She has extensive experience in health care, health law and policy, and poverty law, and her work-related interests have centered on the intersection of health and poverty; she is a member of the Grady Health System Ethics Committee and the Children’s Healthcare of Atlanta Bioethics Committee. Professor Caley teaches courses on health policy and legislation and clinical skills at the College of Law; she also lectures extensively on legal issues affecting child health and well-being.

Professor Bliss has taught Research, Writing and Advocacy at Georgia State University since 2001. Before joining our program, Professor Bliss was a member of the faculty of the University of Florida College of Law where she taught a nine credit hour clinical course and supervised law students in an in-house legal clinic. In addition, Professor Bliss spent seven years in private practice as a litigator in Atlanta. She also served for three and a half years as Deputy Director of the Atlanta Volunteer Lawyers Foundation, where she supervised the pro bono service of private lawyers and clinical law students and lectured at Continuing Legal Education Seminars. She Chaired the Fulton County Family Court Information & Education Committee, which developed the Family Law Information Center, a resource for pro se litigants in Fulton County.

The College of Law successfully recruited two new Legal Writing faculty members, Trisha Kanan and Margaret Hughes Vath. Trisha Kanan earned her J.D. in 2001 from Pepperdine University School of Law where she held a Dean’s Merit Scholarship which provided full tuition for all three years of study, and she served as the Lead Articles Editor of the Pepperdine Law Review. Her undergraduate degree is a B.S in Math and Philosophy (double major), earned magna cum laude in 1998 from UCLA. She is a member of two state Bars, California and Virginia, and sat for the Georgia Bar this past July. Trisha worked two years as an Associate in the Labor and Employment area at Morrison & Foerster in Los Angeles, and two years as an Associate at Williams & Lynch in Richmond, Virginia.

Maggie Vath earned her J.D. from Villanova in 1998, and her B.A. in English/Journalism with a Minor in Music in 1995 from the University of Delaware, where she graduated in the top 10% of her class. She worked as an Associate at Weinstock & Scavo in Atlanta for four years, handling a corporate transactional and litigation practice. She comes to us from Weinstock, Nowack, Curry & Wilco in Atlanta, where, as a Senior Associate, she has continued to maintain both a corporate transactional and litigation practice, and where she served as lead counsel for some 80 non-profit corporations. In addition, she has written and edited articles for Firm and trade magazines; she is a contributing researcher and writer for a treatise on Community Association Law; and she writes for both Harrison Publishing Company and West.

Peri Parks began as the College's first Director of Communications. Peri has over 15 years of significant experience in public and media relations both from a marketing and journalism perspective and comes to Georgia State from Hands-On Network (formerly City-Cares), where she served as the marketing and communications manager. Because Peri’s experience includes a successful 3 year stint as communications manager for the Robinson College of Business' E-Commerce Institute, she brings some familiarity with the workings of the University.

Barbara Waters joined the College of Law as its new Director of Development and Alumni Relations. Waters, a 1973 alumna of Agnes Scott College, has extensive fund-raising experience including annual giving, capital campaigns, endowment funds, corporate and foundation giving, planned giving and special events. Most recently, she led development efforts in Boston for the New England Historic Genealogical Society, an organization with 22,000 members nationwide. Waters also served as Development Director for the Bostonian Society, Boston’s historical society, and the Island Alliance, a public/private partnership supporting a new national park in Boston. Her development career began in New Jersey with The Nature Conservancy.

Matthew Williamson assumed duties as assistant director and supervising attorney for the Tax Clinic, replacing Dean Morley upon his retirement. Morley, who had been with the Clinic since 1997, was the former Atlanta district counsel for the IRS and served with that organization for 31 years before coming out of retirement to join the Clinic for nine years. Williamson was formerly with The Bowden Law Firm, Deloitte & Touche and Arthur Andersen in tax law before joining the Clinic. He is a graduate of Georgia State University, receiving his B.B.A. in Accounting and a Master of Taxation degree.
Williamson is also an alumnus of the College of Law ('04), where he worked in the Tax Clinic as a student.

The College of Law successfully recruited two new librarians to support the Law Library, Ronald Wheeler and Kreig Kitts. Ron Wheeler is the Associate Director for Public Services. Ron replaces Beth Adelman who accepted a position at SUNY Buffalo. Most recently, Ron was the Assistant Director for Faculty, Research & Instructional Services at University of New Mexico School of Law Library. He holds a J.D. from the University of Michigan and a MLIS from Wayne State. In 2005, he was elected by the Class of 2005 as the Faculty Teacher of the Year. He is very active in the American Association of Law Libraries.

Kreig Kitts is the Law Library's newest Reference Librarian. Kreig replaces Nan Adams who accepted a position with the 11th Circuit Law Library. Most recently, Kreig was a Research Librarian at Troutman Sanders. He received his J.D. at Emory where he received the Willard B. Gemmill Law Scholarship. He also holds a Masters in Library Studies from Clark Atlanta. He served as the President of the Atlanta Law Libraries Association in 2004-05.

Faculty Scholarship

The impressive record of scholarly research and publications by the faculty of the College of Law continues, building ever greater professional reputations and contributing to an ever increasing scholarly reputation for the college and university. Legal scholarship constitutes an important part of the college's mission to provide new insights on molding the law to better serve our society. Many of the faculty engage in original and influential scholarly inquiry. Only a portion of faculty endeavors can be mentioned in this summary. The appendix indicates the productivity of the faculty in their scholarly devotees and reflects an increase in scholarship in tune with the college's articulated goals and promotion and tenure policy.

The following represents a sampling of faculty members who had published products of their scholarship this past year: Ron Blasi, the CCH Master Tax Guide and 2006 Bank Tax Guide; Mark Budnitz, articles published in The Business Lawyer and Boston University School of Law's Annual Review of Banking and Financial Law plus updates to his books The Law of Lender Liability and Consumer Banking and Payments Law, including the 2006 Supplement; Clark Cunningham, articles published in the Fordham Urban Law Journal, the Bar Examiner, and the Clinical Law Review; Anne Emanuel, article in SCLC National Magazine and lead author of the ABA Georgia Death Penalty Assessment Report; Marjorie Girth, article published in Georgia State's Law Review; Bill
Gregory, published the second edition of his book *Cases and Materials on Corporations;

Student Accomplishments

In recent years, our student body has become increasingly sophisticated and diverse. Not surprisingly, the areas of interest our students wish to explore have also grown. As a result, the number of chartered College of Law student organizations has nearly doubled in the past five years. This has created substantial challenges in budgeting and providing space for our students and their organizations.

In the budget arena, the university student activity fees funneled through the Student Bar Association to the 25+ organizations has remained virtually static for over five years. Students are finding it harder than ever to put on substantial programs and attend conferences and competitions away from campus. As for space, many of our organizations share cramped office space, and several organizations had no space at all. In the summer of 2006, the College obtained access to space off the West Exhibit area, and has put several student organizations into a communal office there. This should relieve some of the overcrowding and allow all organizations at least some space, but it is proving taxing on our equipment, such as computers, printers, and the like.

The organizations continue to do great things. The Public Interest Law Association had its most successful Public Interest Law Auction yet, raising nearly $20,000. As a result, several students were given fellowships, allowing them each to work at non-paying public interest jobs over the summer months. The Immigration Law Society held a citizenship drive, in which our students teamed up with local attorneys to assist immigrants interested in becoming American citizens. The Oglethorpe Legal Society has continued to offer both academic and social programs to groups comprising our students and our graduates and has given the students great opportunities to learn, socialize, network, and carry the flag for the school. Several other student organizations participated in the AIDS walk or volunteered for service at local soup kitchens, homeless shelters and the like.

The Student Bar Association, which serves as both the representative body for all students and the umbrella organization through which other student organizations receive funding and support, was especially active in 2004-2005. One of the most impressive projects undertaken by this year’s SBA was helping our dozen or so Loyola and Tulane students who were displaced by Hurricane Katrina and matriculated here at the College for a year. The SBA raised over $1400 for the students and offered them free books, school supplies, clothing and even temporary housing. They also coordinated with the Graduate Leadership Council in raising even more money in the middle of the school year.

The entire law school community also pitched in to make Law Week a bigger and better program than the College of Law had ever seen before. We kicked off the week with an inspiring speech by the Georgia Supreme Court’s Justice Robert Benham, who is an avid supporter of the College of Law and our students. For every day of the week, our organizations and the College presented no fewer than half a dozen different speeches, programs or community service projects a day. Following tradition, the SBA ended Law Week with the Barristers Ball, this year at a new Atlantic Station hotel.

As is always the case at the College of Law, our Student Trial Lawyers Association fielded several highly competitive teams in trial competitions nationwide. Our STLA teams finished 2nd in the ABA National Mock Trial Competition, 3rd in the National Trial Advocacy Competition at Michigan State, 2nd and 3rd in the ATLA Competition, and were semi-finalists in the Buffalo-Niagara Mock Trial Invitational.

Our Moot Court teams were also quite successful. They finished 1st in the Georgia State Competition, 1st in the John J. Gibbons National Criminal Procedure Competition, 2nd in the Georgia Intrastate Moot Court Competition, were semi-finalists in the National Health Law Competition, and were quarterfinalists in the Prince Evidence Competition.

The school and our volunteer students remain committed to the Fulton County Jail Project, despite many obstacles to its continuation. The students have also organized several new school associations, bringing our total number of student associations to more than 25.

The students have responded enthusiastically to the school’s Pro bono Recognition program, brought to the students’ attention by several on campus speakers and volunteer opportunities sponsored by our organizations. Under the program, students are asked to provide us with a list of their activities which qualify for recognition. Those who have performed more than 50, 100 or 150 hours of pro bono work are even given special recognition for their efforts at graduation.

Community Outreach and Service

The Georgia State University Tax Clinic continues to serve low-income individuals who are involved with disputes with the Internal Revenue Service. In addition to providing this public service, it serves as an important laboratory for the training of law students and graduate tax students from the College of Business Administration. The Tax Clinic continues to receive support from the Internal Revenue Service to fund the clinic’s activities, and this past year received $85,000. In the past year, the clinic dealt with over 250 taxpayers. Despite the adversarial role of the Georgia State Tax Clinic, the Internal Revenue Service respects the clinic for its success in providing equitable solutions for troubled taxpayers.

The College of Law offers Health Legislation and Advocacy, a two semester experience that introduces second and third year law students to the process by which health-related legislation is developed, introduced, and enacted into law. During the fall, students work with a community partner, such as a non-profit health advocacy group, a non-profit health enterprise, or a health-related government agency to research a legislative issue of interest to the partner and to develop potential legislation for introduction during the legislative session. During the spring semester, while the Georgia General Assembly is in session, students are at the Capitol. They observe the legislative process, attend committee meetings, track and report on health-related legislation, track the health-related budget, and support the work of the community partner on the legislative issue developed during the fall by performing legal research, preparing testimony, and developing educational materials.

Faculty Community Service

As part of the college’s efforts in strengthening and increasing community outreach and public service, law faculty serve in leadership positions and on numerous committees for the Association of American Law Schools, the American Bar Association, the State Bar of Georgia, and for other local and regional organizations where their legal training is of value. A complete listing of this service by faculty is shown in the attached appendix.

Steve Kaminshine served on the Executive Board of the Southeastern Association of Law Schools; Marjorie Girth served as a Planning Committee Member for the AALS 2006 Conference on New Ideas for Legal Educators; Janice Griffith served as both Executive Committee and as the Secretary for the AALS Section on State and Local Government Law; E.R. Lanier served as Chair for the AALS Section on International Legal Exchange and was elected as Executive Board Member to the AALS Sections on Law and History,

Law Library Accomplishments

During fiscal year 2005/2006, the Law Library experienced high turnover in library faculty and in staff. Beth Adelman accepted a position as Head of Collection Management at SUNY-Buffalo to be close to family. Nan Adams accepted a position as Librarian at the 11th Circuit Court of Appeals Library. Staff member Cecelia Womack left for Alabama and Angelic Lyons left to work as a paralegal in a law firm.

On August 1st, Ron Wheeler from the University of New Mexico joined us as the Associate Director of Public Services. Ron received a J.D. from University of Michigan and a M.L.I.S from Wayne State University. Ron, most recently, was the Assistant Director for Faculty, Research, & Instructional Services at the University of New Mexico School of Law Library. Ron has been very active in professional associations and was named Faculty Member of the Year for 2005.

The strength of the collection has shifted from print materials to electronic resources. Although we maintain a strong Georgia collection and several other topical areas, we have shifted to electronic resources. Such pressures have encouraged us to focus attention on achieving maximum value for our resource dollar. Faculty and students prefer online resources for many materials. In addition to Westlaw and LexisNexis, we also subscribe to a number of electronic services, including BNA “All” looseleaf services, LLMC-Digital, CCH Tax Research Network, Making of Modern Law, CIS Serial Set, and Hein Online. There is a host of quality databases available through GALILEO, for example, Lexis Academic Universe.

As reported to the Association of Southeastern Research Libraries (2004-2005), we purchase 1,071 electronic “full-text” journals. Additionally, we hold 22,227 electronic full-text books. The total volume count (including volume equivalents) is 342,894. According to the door count statistics, we had 102,956 visits to the Law Library and October 2005 was the busiest month with 10,132 visits.

The Library’s budget situation over the last several years can be effectively described as flat ($813,000). First and foremost, there has been no ability to keep up with a constant inflation factor. As a result, cancellation of materials has become an unpleasant fact of life for this library. Through very careful decision-making, including use of electronic resources, complete reduction of duplication, and rigid review of all continuation titles, we have barely been able to maintain a core collection of print materials.

Steep price increases have continued unabated during this fiscal year. To illustrate the point, the most recent American Association of Law Libraries’ Price Index for Legal Publications 2d, which tracks inflation of legal publications, documents that between 1998 and 2004 the inflation rate in the law book industry increased by 28%. The key to the future is obviously renewed, steady budget growth with annual inflationary increases. Moving beyond the no-growth trend is an important element of the library’s future fiscal health. We have canceled all duplicate titles and now we are canceling print titles that have online counterparts. While the law school continues to develop centers and clinics, the law library cannot support new programs.

This year, the librarians and the technology staff developed a faculty publication website, which is very popular with the faculty. Additionally, Terrance Manion developed a database subscription website that allows researchers to easily access our electronic resources.

Further details about the Law Library’s accomplishments can be found as an attachment to this report.

Section B. Progress in Institutional Strategic Planning

Done centrally by the University

Section C. Progress in Assessing Institutional Effectiveness

In 2004, the faculty approved a new Learning Outcomes Assessment Plan. It provides for expected learning outcomes in the following areas: communication skills, legal research, analysis and critical thinking, knowledge of legal doctrine, lawyering skills, professionalism and ethics, and preparation for a legal career or a career in a non-legal area that is related to graduate law study. The Plan then outlines the assessment methods to obtain each of the above outcomes.

The Learning Outcomes Assessment Plan calls for the Associate Dean for Academic Affairs to have overall responsibility for the collection of data and the dissemination of reports on the various assessment results. Although the new Learning Outcomes Assessment Plan should assist in the identification of student learning outcomes and non-academic outcomes, the college also continues to rely upon several traditional benchmarks (some of which are incorporated in the Plan) used in the past that provide valuable information on the effectiveness of instruction and the subsequent success of our students. These include student participation in moot court and mock trial competitions, bar passage rates, employment statistics of graduates, placement of graduates in judicial clerkships, and the success of our graduates in obtaining employment and partnerships in prestigious regional and national law firms.

Students’ success rate on the Georgia Bar examination is a particularly important tool for measuring aspects of the college’s institutional. Successful passage of such examinations is a requirement for entry into the legal profession. From its inception, the College of Law at Georgia State has built an impressive record of success on bar examinations. For the July 2005 administration of the Georgia Bar Exam, the pass rate among all test-takers from Georgia State University was 93.5%, the second highest pass rate among Georgia’s accredited law schools.

Employment statistics six months after graduation are also a standard measure used for assessing legal education and are annually collected by the college’s accrediting agency, the American Bar Association, and by U.S. News and World Report for its edition on rating graduate and professional schools in America. The figures for the class of 2005 show an employment rate of 95.29%. Employment in large (51 to 100 lawyers) and very large (over 100) firms is prized and highly competitive. The percentage of Georgia State graduates employed in this category represents 22.22% of the 2005 class. This means that our chosen graduates were picked from regional and national pools of graduates representing some of the most prestigious law schools in the country.

Another measure of the effectiveness of legal instruction received as a student at Georgia State’s College of Law is the success of graduates in achieving partner in prestigious law firms, appointment or election to the bench, and service as legal counsel for major corporations. Georgia State graduates are now partners in Alston & Bird; Arnall, Golden & Gregory; Holland & Knight; Jones, Day, Reavis & Pogue; Kilpatrick & Stockton; Powell, Goldstein, Frazier & Murphy; McKenna Long Aldridge; and others. A number of Georgia State College of Law graduates serve as assistant district attorneys and magistrate judges, and several hold State Court and Superior Court judgeships. Numerous corporate legal offices employ College of Law graduates including AT&T, BellSouth, Cox Enterprises, Equifax, Federal Reserve Bank, Georgia Power, and Georgia-Pacific.

Section D. Improvement of Student Retention and Graduation

The summer skills program and the academic enrichment program are two valuable activities at Georgia State University College of Law that assist with student retention and graduation. Both are intended to improve the success rate of students who are deemed to be at risk of experiencing academic difficulty in law school. The summer skills program is a pre-start program that takes place prior to the beginning of the academic year for first year students. Attendance at the summer skills program is by invitation only; students are selected by use of their index, a figure that projects their first year GPA from their undergraduate GPAs and their LSAT scores. This year we revamped the summer skills program; the duration was shortened from five weeks to two weeks, and the entire course was taught by one instructor, allowing for more focus and structure. Attendance improved, and the student participants reported finding it very helpful. The academic enrichment program, which is open to all students, takes place during the fall and spring semesters. Selected students tutor sections of two first year courses, presently Civil Procedure and Property. The student tutors work under the direction of the faculty academic enrichment committee, and work closely with the Professor for whose section they are tutoring.

Syllabi and Course Modules in Georgia Practice and Procedure are multi-volume in nature, and encompass the fields of Subject Matter Jurisdiction, Personal Jurisdiction, Venue, Process and Service of Process, and Pleadings within Georgia law. There are extensive in nature and have developed a certain market value even among students and practitioners who are not enrolled in my courses. Each of these Modules undergoes daily revision, depending on events in Georgia appellate courts and in the Legislature.

5. Additional Significant Professional Service Activities:

Clark Cunningham

During 2005 Professor Cunningham founded The National Institute for Teaching Ethics and Professionalism (NIFTEP). NIFTEP is a consortium of five nationally-recognized centers on ethics and professionalism: The Louis Stein Center for Law & Ethics at Fordham University; The Mercer University School of Law Center for Legal Ethics and Professionalism; The Nelson Mullins Riley & Scarborough Center on Professionalism at the University of South Carolina; The Stanford Center on Ethics; and The W. Lee Burge Endowment for Law & Ethics at Georgia State University. NIFTEP is also sponsored by the American Bar Association Standing Committee on Professionalism and the Georgia Chief Justice's Commission on Professionalism, which has approved a 3-year $15,000 grant to NIFTEP. The First Annual NIFTEP workshop on teaching ethics and professionalism took place in Atlanta from Friday, September 23 - Sunday, September 25, 2005. There were more than 30 speakers and participants, comprised of full-time law teachers and practicing lawyers engaged in teaching ethics and promoting professionalism. The Friday program, which was held at the State Bar Building, was an approved CLE program that attracted a number of participants in addition to the NIFTEP conferees. Professor Cunningham, who serves as director of NIFTEP, organized and chaired the workshop.

The Effective Lawyer-Client Communication Project, which Professor Cunningham directs, has entered into a collaboration with the Glasgow Graduate School of Law (GGSL) in Scotland to research, test and implement innovative methods for teaching and assessing lawyer-client communication. This project has attracted $20,000 in funding from the College of Law of England and Wales – the largest provider of legal education in Europe – which plans to test the methods being piloted at GGSL in its own programs.

Professor Cunningham is consulting with one of the oldest professional bodies in the world, the Society of Writers to Her Majesty's Signet, based in Edinburgh, to develop criteria to test proficiency in effective client communication and ethical decision-making as a component of a new specialty accreditation program for Scottish lawyers being launched in 2006.

On November 11, 2005, the Atlanta Journal-Constitution published an extensive story about the efforts of GSU law student Jeanette Wasdin to observe court hearings inside the Atlanta City Jail: "Law Student Finds Court Off Limits on Weekends," (Nov. 11, 2005). Wasdin was working on this project as a student in the new course Professor Cunningham was teaching in Fall 2005: Criminal Justice Fieldwork and Law Reform. As a result of her work, including this newspaper article, the City Jail modified its procedures to allow interested members of the public to observe hearings inside the jail.

Janice Griffith

Center for the Comparative Study of Metropolitan Growth, Georgia State University College of Law

Professor Griffith serves as the Center’s Director of Local and Regional Initiatives. Professor Griffith is involved in the Urban Fellows Program, symposia sponsored by the Center, and in various community outreach programs undertaken by the Center, including the Center’s involvement with the Quality Growth Legal & Technical Committee.

Quality Growth Legal & Technical Committee, Atlanta, Georgia, Member August 2004-present. Professor Griffith continues to provide advice to this committee which is in the process of preparing a final report.

The Quality Growth Legal & Technical Committee was created at the recommendation of the Metropolitan Atlanta Chamber of Commerce Quality Growth Task Force. The Georgia Regional Transportation Authority coordinated the activities of the Committee. The Committee was granted the mission to identify and clarify legal and technical issues that impede quality development in the metropolitan Atlanta region.

Professor Griffith participated in the Committee’s project to examine how the region can achieve development that makes more efficient use of existing and planned infrastructure. In 2004, she studied the use of “conservation subdivisions” in nine counties and completed a comparative analysis of existing practices.

Responses to the media on State and Local Government Law Issues:

Responded to questions on May 11, 2005 asked by reporter, Sarah Campbell of the Times-Herald, Newnan, Georgia. Questions related to a county ordinance alleged to be in conflict with a state law.

Provided comments to scholars on works in progress (too numerous to list here).

E. R. Lanier

I have been active in an of counsel capacity in the case of Ukrainian Orthodox Church v. Holy Ascension Orthodox Church, an action for equitable and declaratory relief (now pending in the Appellate Division, State of New Jersey), which centers on significant issues of first impression in New Jersey under the First Amendment to the U. S. Constitution. I have devoted over 250 hours to this matter since August of 2002. In this connection I have made appearances in both of the Appellate Division and the Supreme Court on New Jersey. In recognition of the service I was recently awarded the Order of St. Vladimir the Great by action of the Patriarch of the Ukrainian Orthodox Church.

By action of the Metropolitan of the Orthodox Church in America I was named a member of the National Legal Board of that church.

I have been active as co-counsel or of counsel in approximately two (2) other pro bono matters in Georgia trial courts in 2005.

Andrea Curcio
Professor Curcio spends a significant amount of time mentoring junior faculty. Professor Curcio also has read and edited draft articles by Professors Washington and Saito.

William Edmundson
Guest blogger, The Leiter Reports, Oct. 17-23, 2005

Marjorie Girth Manuscript reviews for:
Janice C. Griffith: at least two drafts of her article “Regional Governance Reconsidered,” for the U. Va. International Law Journal; and at least two drafts of her chapter entitled “Transition from Faculty to Higher Education Administrator and Transition Back to Faculty” in the book on higher education administration that Provost Ron Henry is editing.

William Gregory
Professor Gregory submitted the manuscript of Unincorporated Business Associations, 3d Edition (2006) to West Group. The book should be published within the next six months. Professor Gregory will proofread the manuscript from the printer and prepare a Teacher's Manual for the new edition.

Professor Gregory is currently working on an article on corporate governance.

Professor Gregory helped to plan a program on Securities Law (with Vickie Brown). The program involved Bill Dixon, Conrad Brooks and some other securities attorneys. The attorneys spoke about the work they did and what academic skills they needed in order to become a securities attorney.

Prof. Gregory read two articles written by Prof. Lance Cole, Penn State. He then wrote a report on Prof. Coles work. This report was needed by Penn State for their tenure review. The report was requested by Dean Philip McConnaughay.

Prof. Gregory is a director of the Georgia State Federal Credit Union. He has attended all of the director's meetings which occur on the 4th Monday of the month at 1pm. Prof. Gregory informed many students at the College of Law of their eligibility to be members of the credit union.

Prof. Gregory assists in selecting the SBLI lecturers.

Wendy Hensel

Professor Hensel is currently working on an article entitled, "Sharing the Short Bus: Images of Disability in the Inclusive Classroom." Prior the enactment of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, being labeled as “disabled” in an educational setting was highly stigmatizing and the grounds for exclusion from school. As a result of this federal law, however, children with disabilities are entitled not only to access to the classroom, but also to supports and services necessary to achieve a “free and appropriate public education.” Because non-disabled children are not so entitled, parents, particularly those who are highly educated and affluent, are pushing to have children with even mild impairments labeled “disabled” in order to secure entitlements from school districts. As a result, the costs of special education are skyrocketing. This article explores the legal implications of this shift in the social imagery of disability, looking to the legislative history of the IDEA, case law, and interdisciplinary scholarship.

Tanya Washington

Professor Washington continued to serve, during the entire year, as a member of the Human Relations Committee for the City of Atlanta. She assumed the role of temporary Chair of the Commission in August of 2005. As Chair she conducted two hearings and drafted and presented to Mayor Shirley Franklin formal findings of fact in both sexual orientation based discrimination cases. She prepared and disseminated the minutes for the September, October, November and December 2005 meetings. The Commission met during the first Monday of each month and members were required to review case files in advance of each meeting.
