

The GSU Law Review Presents:

"The Criminal Justice System in a Time of Economic Meltdown: Crisis or Opportunity for Reform?"

January 27, 2012, 8:30 AM (Registration) - 4:00 PM
Hosted by Nelson Mullins in Atlantic Station

Description:

This one-day symposium will examine the ways that our criminal justice system might respond to our ongoing national economic crisis by implementing long-awaited reforms. A host of distinguished legal scholars will join us to discuss the ways that problems in our criminal justice system are effecting our economy on national and local levels, and how we might further the goals of our criminal justice system while paring down government expense.
