GEORGIA STATE UNIVERSITY

ANNUAL REPORT

FY99

COLLEGE OF LAW'

JANICE C. GRIFFITH, DEAN .

AUGUST, 1999

Major Accomplishments

The 1999 fiscal year was one of progress and success for the College of Law. Although notable accomplishments were achieved in many areas across the law school, including supporting greater faculty research and scholarly activities and increasing community outreach and public service, the two dominant features of this past year were the strides made in integrating technology into all aspects of academic endeavors and expanding international relationships. These accomplishments were guided by the College's strategic plan and the articulated objectives of Dean Janice C. Griffith, who is concluding a third successful year as dean of the college.

Technology

Georgia State College of Law continues to be in the forefront of the technological revolution overtaking legal education. The college was recently named among the Top 25 "Most Wired" law schools in the country by National Jurist magazine. This past fall a renovation of the college's main lecture hall was completed, providing 140 workstations with electricity and data ports for access to the college's network and the internet. In a similar fashion this past year many of the Law Library's carrels and all of the study rooms were fitted with network access. By duplicating the offerings of the public lab and teaching lab at these remote locations via the network, the capacity of the computer laboratories has been expanded some six fold.

Computer projection systems and other audio-visual equipment continues to be installed in more and more of the college's classrooms. This permanently installed equipment, coupled with the use of portable projection systems and laptops, makes technology available to all instructional areas of the college. This past year saw the completion of the multi-year upgrade of the equipment in the courtroom with the installation of a new control board and additional cameras and microphones that allow the taping and editing of classroom presentations and courtroom simulations.

The web presence of the College of Law was expanded greatly this past year. Inquiries of incoming first year students showed a vast majority reviewed the college's web page during their deliberations as to which law schools to attend. An increasing number of new students utilized the online application process. Now found on the web are course descriptions, syllabi, class assignments, the college's bulletin, curriculum planning guides, information about faculty and administrators, notices of upcoming law school events, an on-line job placement bulletin for graduating students and alumni, and many other things. The Law Library's web site was upgraded to make its web subscriptions and resources for online research more centrally accessible to faculty and staff. Seven new computers were installed in the library for use by patrons other than law students and faculty, providing those patrons access to online databases for legal research. All the major law firms in Atlanta have internet access to Georgia State's online catalog. This past year also saw the initiation of an electronic reserve system in the library, whereby course materials placed on reserve by faculty for students in their courses are now available online for students to download electronically.

Extensive training for faculty and staff was conducted by the college's computer support unit, including the first year writing instructors who will inaugurate in class computer editing of papers utilizing newly acquired laptops and projectors and faculty and their support staff for placing curricula materials on the web. Mandatory training for first year students in methods of online legal research continues to be conducted by the electronics services librarian. This same person was instrumental in the successful conversion of the law library to a new automation system in February of 1999. Another significant task of staff this past year was the conversion of all computers to Windows 98 to ensure Y2K compliance.

International relationships

The college has been fortunate in times past to have short-term visits by foreign faculty and dignitaries. This past year for the first time the College of Law hosted an international visiting professor of law for an entire semester. Professor Hans Dolinar of Johannes Kepler University of Linz, Austria taught two courses in international commercial arbitration and comparative law during the fall term of 1998. Professor Dolinar's visit was part of an ongoing exchange of faculty and students between Georgia State and this European university, providing a wonderful opportunity for comparing America's common law system with Europe's civil law system.

Linz, Austria is the principal site of the College of Law's foreign summer program headed by Georgia State's Professor E. R. Lanier. Professor Lanier conducted another successful session during the summer with students and faculty studying international commercial arbitration and visiting the major arbitration courts in Central Europe. The relationships resulting from program enhances the academic programs of the College of Law throughout the year. For this year in question, the College was pleased to host short visits to the campus of Dr. Marie-Beatrix Tupy, Secretary-General of Vienna Arbitration Court, and Dr. Eva Horvath, President of the Hungarian Arbitration Court in Budapest which is attached to the Hungarian Chamber of Commerce.

Professor Charles Marvin, a specialist in administrative law and fluent in French, visited the Cote d'Ivoire in March as part of the university's ongoing relationship with that African country. He addressed business and government officials and lectured at the University of Bouake. The College of Law's Natsu Saito was invited to participate in international conferences in Mexico and Cuba.

Community outreach and public service

Two entities of the College of Law continue to provide important service to the community. The Georgia State University Tax Clinic serves low-income individuals who are involved with disputes with the Internal Revenue Service. Besides this public service, it is an important laboratory for the training of law students and graduate tax students from the College of Business Administration. More than 500 cases have been handled by students since the inception of the clinic, and it remains the only such entity in the southeast. Despite the adversarial role of the Georgia State Tax Clinic, the IRS respects the clinic for its success in providing equitable solutions for troubled taxpayers. This past year the clinic received a $100,000 grant from Internal Revenue Service to support the clinic's activities. The Atlanta office of the IRS presented to the clinic the "Spirit of America" award, and a national task force studying tax assistance for the poor traveled to Atlanta to visit Georgia State, with our institution being the only law school tax clinic in the nation visited by the team. Finally, the college was honored by a visit from the Commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service, who toured the clinic and discussed with Professor Ronald Blasi the plight of low-income taxpayers.

The Consortium on Negotiation and Conflict Resolution continued its rapid expansion of activities this past year. CNCR conducts research into the nature of conflict and the theories and principles of resolution while applying this knowledge in training and educating others in mediation and resolution. The consortium is an interdisciplinary and inter-university partnership which supports the Board of Regents Initiative and Policy Direction on Conflict Resolution. This past year CNCR sponsored a successful regional conference on the teaching of conflict resolution as well as offered numerous training sessions at units of the University System of Georgia and at private institutions such as Emory University and Columbia Theological Seminary. This past year was also a planning time for the implementation in the fall of 1999 of a conflict resolution program for the Atlanta Public Schools where students from Georgia State and other local universities are trained to teach conflict resolution to students, administrators, teachers, and parents.

The College of Law, together with Georgia State's Center for Digital Commerce, sponsors the Electronic Court Filing Project, a joint project to explore the automation of Georgia's courts through the electronic filing and signing of court documents. The project's research encompasses and impacts on the areas of digital signatures, electronic records and signature legislation, national legal and technical standards development, and courses at the College of Business in electronic commerce. This past year the project assisted in the drafting of Georgia Senate Bill 62, which amended Georgia's Electronic Records and Signatures Act and was signed into law in April.

The College continued its efforts in strengthening and increasing community outreach and public service. Faculty serve in leadership positions and on numerous committees for the Association of American Law Schools, the American Bar Association, and the State Bar of Georgia as well as other local and regional organizations where their legal training is of value. Ellen Podgor serves as Chair of the Criminal Justice Section of the AALS. Charity Scott completed her service this past year as Chair of the Health Law Section of the State Bar of Georgia. Anne Emanuel is President of the Board of the Georgia Center for Law in the Public Interest. Law Librarian Nancy Johnson continues to serve on the Executive Board of the American Association of Law Libraries. Dean Janice Griffith served as a facilitator at the annual Law School Deans Workshop of the ABA, moderated a panel discussion on southern violence at the annual Southeastern Association of American Law Schools meeting, and made a presentation at the Georgia Municipal Association's annual convention concerning Governor Barnes' regional transportation authority. Jack Williams is Vice-Chair of the Bankruptcy Taxation Committee of the American Bankruptcy Institute. Associate Dean Steven Kaminshine was a reporter to the Labor and Employment Law Reform Group of the Labor and Employment Section of the Georgia Bar and consulted on a pro bono basis to plaintiffs in a class action litigation in federal court in California concerning age discrimination. Marjorie Girth continues to serve on the Georgia Supreme Court's Commission on Equality and most recently was elected Secretary of the commission. Marjorie Knowles is completing the second of her two year term as Chair of the AALS Committee on Academic Freedom and Tenure. Mary Radford is on the Executive Committee of the Georgia Appellate Practice Resource Center, which deals with death penalty cases in the Georgia courts. L. Lynn Hogue is a member of the Board of Directors of the Georgia Legal History Foundation.

Service is not limited to faculty activities. Each spring under the sponsorship of the Student Bar Association, students, and faculty as well, devote a week to a variety of community service projects in celebration of "Law Week", an expansion of the traditional Law Day celebration on May 1st. Of the many activities this past year, a new and noteworthy project addressed the problems in the Fulton County Courts. The court system has suffered delays for the past two years because of an enormous backlog of unfiled cases. During Law Week Georgia State student volunteers filed nearly 200 cases to help reduce the backlog.

Interdisciplinary activities

The College of Law continues to increase interdisciplinary and interdepartmental cooperation. Law faculty now teach courses in the Colleges of Arts and Sciences, Business Administration, and Education. A member of the Risk Management and Insurance faculty of the College of Business now provides an important addition to the law school's curriculum offerings by teaching insurance law to law students. The Tax Clinic continues to provide excellent training and learning opportunities to graduate tax students in the College of Business as well as to law students. As mentioned, the electronic filing of court documents project is an interdisciplinary research and outreach effort between Law and the College of Business Administration. The college faculty were pleased this past spring to approve a joint degree program with the Department of Philosophy, bringing to three such joint programs now functioning between the law school and other colleges at Georgia State.

Scholarship

The impressive record of scholarly research and publications by the faculty of the College of Law continues, building an ever greater professional reputation for themselves and contributing to an increasing scholarly reputation for the college and the university. Notable among the books published by the faculty was William Edmundson's Three Anarchical Fallacies: An Essay on Political Authority, issued by Cambridge University Press. Other books included Cases and Other materials on Corporations, coauthored by Georgia State's William Gregory and University of Florida's Thomas Hurst; Winning Research Skills, 4th edition by Nancy Johnson and others; Patricia Morgan's Tax Procedure and Tax Fraud; and two volumes on bankruptcy by Jack Williams.

The following represents faculty members who published scholarly articles this past year: Mark Budnitz, South Carolina Law Review; Andrea Curcio, University of Cincinnati Law Review; William Edmundson, Law and Philosophy; Shubha Ghosh, Fordham Intellectual Property, Media & Entertainment Law Journal; L. Lynn Hogue, Creighton Law Review; Nancy Johnson, Georgia State University Law Review; Ellen Podgor, St. Thomas Law Review; Natsu Saito, Yale Human Rights Development Law Review; and Jack Williams, American Bankruptcy Institute Law Review.

Development

The past year was significant for the College of Law's development efforts with several major gifts raising the law school's assets in the University Foundation to over $4,000,000. The largest gift was $2.5 for a chair in ethics and professional responsibility, resulting with a court settlement against the Dupont Corporation. In that same settlement was a $250,000 endowment for a symposium to rotate between the four Georgia law schools. Ben Johnson, the first dean of the College of Law, generously endowed a scholarship for the benefit of part-time students. The College, with contributions received through the annual campaign, established an endowed scholarship fund to be the future recipient of yearly alumni giving.

Major faculty or staff changes

Important personnel actions accomplished for the last year were the hiring of the following: Julian Juergensmeyer as the first chair holder of the Ben F. Johnson, Jr. Chair; Neil Kinkopf as assistant professor and director of the college's developing legislative affairs program; Kelly Timmons as assistant professor; Catherine Bennett and Wendy Hensel as new Reading, Writing, and Advocacy instructors; Terrance Manion as electronic services librarian; and Suzanne Mucklow as public services librarian.

Progress in Assessing Institutional Effectiveness

The College of Law has long identified several instruments or measures to assess institutional effectiveness. Success of student teams in moot court and mock trial competitions reflect the rigorous intellectual preparation and practical lawyer skills that student receive in class. The College of Law has a long record of student achievement, and the past year proved no different. College of Law students fielded ten teams in nine competitions around the country this past fiscal year. The most notable victory was winning the championship in the National Invitational Mock Trial Competition, besting teams from such schools as SUNY Buffalo, University of Houston, Emory University, and Northwestern University. The College of Law also won the Southeast Regionals of the National Moot Court Competition.

A valuable tool for measuring institutional effectiveness for the College of Law is the success rate of students sitting for the Georgia Bar examinations. Successful passage of such examinations are a requirement for entry into the legal profession. From its inception, the College of Law at Georgia State has built an impressive record of success on bar examinations. The principle date for taking the exam is in July after the spring commencement. Another testing is done in February for the few who graduate in December or who are repeating the test. For the July 1998 administration of the Georgia Bar Exam participants trained at Georgia State University had a 84.6% pass rate with those taking the test for the first time having a passage rate of 88.1%.

For the February 1999 administration of the test all takers affiliated with Georgia State had a rate of 64.2% and first time takers had a rate of 70.5%.

Employment statistics six months after graduation are a standard measure used for assessing legal education and are annually collected by the College's accrediting agency, the American Bar Association, and by U.S. News and World Report for its edition on rating graduate and professional schools in America. The figures for the class of 1998 show an employment rate of 94.12%. Employment in large (51 to 100 lawyers) and very large (over 100) firms is prized and highly competitive. The percentage of Georgia State graduates employed in this category has been steadily increasing and represents 17.37% of the 1998 class. This means that our chosen graduates were picked from regional and national pools of graduates representing some of the most prestigious law schools in the country.

Another measure of the effectiveness of legal instruction received as a student at Georgia State's College of Law is the success of graduates in achieving partner in prestigious law firms, appointment of election to the bench, and service as legal counsel for major corporations. Georgia State graduates are now partners in Alston & Bird; Arnall, Golden & Gregory; Holland & Knight; Jones, Day, Reavis & Pogue; Kilpatrick & Stockton; Powell, Goldstein, Frazier & Murphy; Long, Aldridge & Norman and others. A number of Georgia State College of Law graduates serve as assistant district attorneys and magistrate judges, and Beverly Collins sits on the State Court of Cobb County. Numerous corporate legal offices employ College of Law graduates including AT&T, BellSouth, Cox Enterprises, Equifax, Federal Reserve Bank, Georgia Power, and Georgia-Pacific.

Retention & Graduation

The summer skills program and the academic enrichment program are two valuable activities at Georgia State University College of Law to assist with student retention and graduation. Both of these entities are intended to improve the success rate of students who are deemed to be at risk of experiencing academic difficulty in law school. The summer skills program is a pre-start program that takes place prior to the beginning of the academic year for first year students. The academic enrichment program takes place during the regular school year and consists of tutorials offered by upper level students under the direction of a faculty committee.

Testified on public commenting proposal to the Georgia Board of the Department of Natural Resources.

Shubha Ghosh

Professor Ghosh was interviewed by Donna Higgins, a writer for Software Law Bulletin, an Andrews Publication, on how rules regarding admissibility of expert testimony would affect Y2K litigation. Professor Ghosh was cited in the October 1998 issue of the bulletin in an article entitled "Pending U.S. Supreme Court Decision Will Weigh Heavily in Y2K Litigation." The bulletin is read extensively in the software industry and is available on Westlaw. (See Binder, Tab 4).

Professor Ghosh offered extensive comments on a manuscript authored by Professor Peter Marguiles of St. Thomas University School of Law. The article was accepted by Rutgers Law Journal and cites Professor Ghosh's work and thanks him for his input.

Professor Ghosh offered editorial expertise and extensive comments on an essay written by Professor Alfred Brophy of Oklahoma City University School of Law for the Oklahoma City University Law Review's symposium on Native American Law published in December 1998.

Professor Ghosh solicited articles and wrote a brief introductory essay to Oklahoma City University Law Review's Symposium on Pynchon and Law to be published in May 1999.

Professor Ghosh organized two panels of papers to be presented at the 1999 Annual Law and Society Meeting in Chicago during May 1999. Professor Ghosh wrote the proposal and contacted participants, which include full faculty from Indiana University Law School at Bloomington, Syracuse University, Tulane University, Stetson, and The University of Iowa. The panels are entitled "Culture and Property I" and "Culture and Property II." Professor Ghosh will present preliminary research on the historical and cultural origins of the phrase "intellectual property" as a participant on the panel. (See Binder, Tab 4).

Professor Ghosh prepared four abstracts of papers for the American Law and Economics Association at Yale Law School to be considered for presentation at the 1999 Annual Meetings in New Haven. Final selections will be made in February.

Professor Ghosh took over responsibility for running Ylopearl, an email listserv that allows member Asian-American professors in law and other disciplines to communicate among themselves. The listserv is housed in and managed from Georgia State University College of Law after being at Seattle University for the past three years and Syracuse University for two years prior.

Professor Ghosh was invited in October 1998 to participate as a panelist on a roundtable as part of the First National Meeting of the Six Regional People of Color Legal Scholarship Conference in Chicago from March 25-27, 1999. The roundtable is entitled "Celebrating Our Emerging Voices: Coherence or Tower of Bable?" Professor Ghosh will speak on law and economics and its application to issues of ethnicity and race. Professor Ghosh will participate on the roundtable with Randall Kennedy of Harvard Law School, Cheryl Harris of UCLA, Fred Yen of Boston College, and Frank Valdes of Miami.
